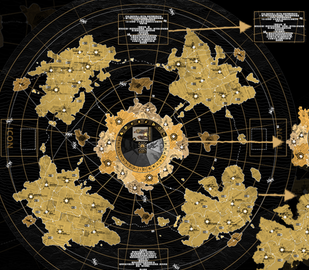
INTRODUCTION

Recommended Players: 2-4
Recommended Duration: Approximately 1 hour for a 4-player game on the main map; each round of actions takes about 3-4 minutes.
Contents: 1 game map, a set of character cards, a set of corresponding player boards (private areas), a set of currency tokens, building tokens, player tokens, dice, a set of Event cards, and a set of Fortune cards.
Victory Condition: Be the first player to reach 20 points.
Game Overview: Players are deployed across four different continents. You will develop your continent, construct buildings, gather resources, and more. However, beware of sabotage by other players and nuclear radiation contamination, both of which can lead to your defeat. You earn points through activities such as developing land tiles and advancing technology; the first player to reach the target score wins the game.
Turn Sequence:
1. Advance the round and collect resources. 2. Check if a new Fortune card needs to be revealed. 3. Collect resources based on your land tiles. 4. Perform actions based on your available resources (specific actions are indicated on the player boards and the main map).

MAP & ICONS



Currency:

Resources are categorized into human resources, food, construction materials, and machinery.
Each resource serves a specific function, and different combinations allow for various actions—such as purchasing event cards, increasing stability, constructing landmarks, or developing technology points.
Additionally, to prevent the clutter caused by an excess of individual resource tokens, accumulating five units of a single resource type allows them to be exchanged for a single "5-value" token representing that resource.

Rules Area:

This section clearly outlines the game rules, detailing how to win, resource acquisition, and the functions of core tiles. It also addresses how to handle potential disputes and covers other relevant aspects of the game.

Central Area:

This section houses the most critical core plate, the turn progress bar, the radiation level tracker, and the designated zones for placing Fortune Cards and standard Event Cards.

Standard Zones:

Each player can select their own starting territory, which features cities rich in resources and corresponding stability zones; the maximum stability value for each territory is determined by its transport accessibility.

PRIVATE AREAS & CHARACTER CARDS

Private Area:

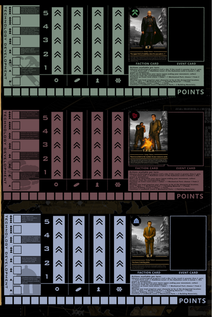
Each character has a dedicated private area featuring clearly defined functional zones.

Tech Point Area:

This area is primarily used to showcase the effects that emerge at different technology levels.

Resources and Card-Placement Areas:

Used for placing resource icons and various types of cards.



Character Cards:

These cards represent your faction and are drawn at the start of the game. Each card features unique starting faction effects, an exclusive technology development path, and specific signature abilities. Additionally, the bottom of the card details the intriguing history of the faction.

PROCESS AND DRAFT

Card Draft: The cards are designed using intuitive symbols and icons—reminiscent of traffic signs—to ensure their meaning can be grasped at a glance without the need for text explanations. Additionally, distinct background styles differentiate the various card types, ensuring each one is easily recognizable.

EVENT CARDS

Event Cards: These can be purchased with a certain amount of resources or obtained by moving to specific zones. Different cards offer various buffs or debuffs, and you can also read short stories about the Wasteland at the bottom of the cards.

FATE CARD

Fortune Cards: Draw five random effect cards at the start of the game. Reveal one card at the beginning and again every five turns to apply the listed buffs or debuffs; you can also read short stories about the wasteland at the bottom of each card.

PROCESS AND DRAFT

Map Draft: The landmasses were inspired by a game set in a magical world. Initially, the design included natural features like mountains and rivers, but these were later removed to streamline gameplay. Drawing from territory-control board games, the land was divided into irregular, organic-looking tiles. Additionally, universal modules were incorporated into the core area to enhance functional convenience and ensure a cohesive artistic style.

Character Drafts: The character designs draw inspiration primarily from wasteland-style games and the historical backdrop of World War II, with character abilities derived from these same themes. Various artistic styles were explored during the initial design phase, and the final versions shown here are the result of multiple rounds of revision.
